We develop community space projects for the benefit of populations with limited financial resources in Bogotá, D.C. with a focus on social development. Our projects are architecturally sustainable, maintainable, environmentally responsible and serve as an effective open network of communication, supported by three lines of work: architectural design, cultural and social development.

As a nonprofit organization, Architecture for Humanity-Bogotá, D.C. will dream, choose, diagnose, imagine, organize, realize, evaluate and celebrate housing projects and community spaces with improved infrastructure for populations in need in Colombia.
